Excerpt from The Divine Purpose of Grace: As Seen From the Dark Valley of Sin in the Light of the Methods of Christ and of the Spirit In the work, entitled The Divine Wisdom, the purpose was to conceive the order of the development of thought as it is to be found in philosophy. The desire was to enter into fellowship with the great thinkers of the past and their thoughts; and, in this way to rise to their ideals, and understand the objects they had in view in their studies. The results ended in this direction, that philosophers had to be conceived as particular thinkers, all studying from their own standpoints; all individualistic as related to their messages of truth to mankind; all animated by high ideals and far-reaching general conceptions; and, all failing to discover that harmony and unity in the universe which could be accepted by true thinkers. What was pointed out in that book tended in this direction: it was impossible, in the nature of things, that they could come to an agreement; being...
